Symon Soler

Symon Soler is a Filipino singer and actor best known as a vocalist with 1990s OPM group Jeremiah, lending his voice to hits including "Bakit Ka Iiyak," "Oh Babe," "Sa Ugoy Ng Duyan," "Basta't Ikaw," and "Halaga." After more than a decade away from music, Symon returns as a solo artist with his debut single, "Sagot sa Dasal," under his own label, Symphoni Entertainment.

Symon Soler got his start as a child actor in Philippine film and television, stemming from a showbiz family. His parents are 1970s matinee idol Jun Soler and premiere contrabida actress Raquel Monteza; his grandfather was stage and TV host Virgilio Garcia, and his aunt is actress Kristine Garcia. His brother, Ryan Soler, is also in the industry.

In 1999, following the release of Jeremiah's first album, Symon joined the group's lineup, lending his voice to hits including "Bakit Ka Iiyak," "Oh Babe," "Sa Ugoy Ng Duyan," "Basta't Ikaw," and "Halaga." Concert tours across the United States and Japan followed in 2002 and 2003.

Alongside and after his time with Jeremiah, Symon continued performing and acting in Manila — including the film Sanggano't Sanggago (2001) and the television series Daisy Siete — before relocating to Los Angeles in 2007. There, he built an entirely new career, first in marketing and business development, and more recently in healthcare administration.

In 2023, Symon founded Symphoni Entertainment, an independent label built to give artists — starting with himself — full ownership of their sound and their story. His debut solo single, "Sagot sa Dasal" ("Answer to Prayer"), arrived in February 2026, marking his return to music after more than two decades. Symon also currently performs alongside his Jeremiah bandmates in the group's ongoing reunion, including their first confirmed show in Long Beach, California this September.
